

The walled town of Taroudant

"I went on Celia's singing holiday and loved every minute. This is a very well-run guest house with lovely staff and food. I felt totally spoilt. The rooftop singing morning and evening was very special." Liz Penny

"Spent a wonderful week at this great accommodation- with the most kind, creative and funny group of people you could hope to end up on holiday with. Some were friends before I went but all felt like friends by the time we left- staff and guests alike. The accommodation wanted for nothing in my view- clean, pleasant with many thoughtful extras like blankets, hot water bottles and jellabahs to borrow if it got cold (which it didn't really). Beds extremely comfortable, which is really important and food was all delicious, with vegetarian and meat or fish option available. I felt really cared for at all times and loved all the trips and experiences on offer.... I can't speak highly enough of the knowledgeable and hardworking staff team."

Celia Webb brings a blend of depth, focus and light-heartedness to her singing teaching, always aiming for an uplifting of the body and soul using extraordinary and glorious harmony songs from all over the world. After this, the joy takes care of itself.

Experience early mornings on the stunning roof terrace, sample and explore local delights, dive deep into the joys of harmony singing with a selection of gorgeous material, and the even foray into creating your own. And of course, there's plenty of time for a little dancing, swimming, reading and getting lost-on-purpose.

Everything will be taught by ear.

No special musical knowledge required.

“Had a fantastic week here in November singing with great people. The staff were kind, helpful and welcoming. The food was fantastic and plentiful. The trips gave a good insight into the local area and the way of life and demonstrated their support for the local people. The singing with Celia was joyful and inclusive. Singing in the early morning sunrise and the sunsets on the roof top terrace was a wonderful experience.” Velta
